

Medical Inventory Specialist at Moab Regional Hospital

Moab Regional Hospital is seeking qualified candidates for one Medical Inventory Specialist position. This role is essential in the provision of care to all patients and workflow of the entire organization. Responsibilities include management of stock from delivery truck to departmental use. It will also encompass all aspects of the ordering process, including departmental support and education as well as real-time management of supply levels. Special projects are also an integral part of the role, which could include anything from designing storage solutions to selling old equipment to training new hires on supply procurement procedures and more. This position works as part of a very small department so flexibility and a willingness to help out is key. This is the perfect role for a CNA or MA looking to move into areas outside of the clinical setting. The right candidate will have knowledge of medical supplies and their usage, a high level of initiative, provide excellent customer service to our internal and external customers, possess impeccable attention for details, and be highly organized. This is a full-time (40 hours/week), year-round, benefited position.
